

REDS TAKE ZNAMENKA, LOSE AT KIEV

ITALIAN UNITS
NOW FIGHTING
WITH ALLIESTROOPS SEE CHANCE TO REDEEM THEIR PLACE IN WAR

BY DON WHITEHEAD
At the Italian Headquarters of the Fifth Army, Nov. 7 (Delayed) (P)—An Italian unit moved into the line against the Germans last night to relieve an American unit while Crown Prince Umberto who holds the rank of field marshal stood by the roadside to watch his countrymen march into combat.

An Italian captain with a red nose shrugged his shoulders and waved his hands eloquently. "We know the world will be watching us," he said. "We know that the part we are taking is not of great importance in the size of the operation, but it is symbolic to us. It is a chance to redeem ourselves."

Soldiers Change Sides
This was a great day at this headquarters in a little farm house near the front lines because Italian troops who three months ago were in the armies of the axis now were preparing to fight the Germans alongside the American doughboys and British Tommies.

In one of the strangest developments of World War II they had formally accepted their role as co-belligerents of the allies. "These troops come from the north of Italy," said a captain. "They will fight to get back to their homes and families. They have much to fight for."

As he talked staff officers bustled in and out of the room on a second floor of the farm house or pored over maps of their sector of the front. On the floor below the Americans had a regimental command post.

Transportation Fantastic
Traffic to the front was a fantastic conglomeration of American, British and Italian vehicles—almost every conceivable sort of transport.

Italian troops came up in buses, taxi cabs and trucks and by motorcycle and bicycle. Somehow they had gathered together a great fleet of motor vehicles which the Germans failed to seize or destroy in their retreat north. Their trucks had both the United States star and the House of Savoy cross painted on them.

And they brought with them their own artillery and ammunition, tents, medical supplies, hospitals, ordnance units, engineers and necessary equipment. Under cover of darkness they moved into position ready for an attack on one of the toughest sectors of the entire front, their first objective being bald rocky heights on which the enemy was strongly dug in.

Hard Job Ahead
"The Italians have a hard job ahead of them," said Capt. Peter F. Chambers of New York City, the corps liaison officer. "They were not given a snap assignment."

When the first contingents began arriving at the front they waved to the Yanks and called excited greetings obviously trying to establish good terms with the doughboys.

American troops sharing highways, bivouac areas, command post sites and communication lines with the former enemy accepted the unusual situation rather stolidly and with reserve—waiting to see what the Italians accomplished on their side of the fight.

Italian artillery, composed of 75, 100 and 105 millimeter guns and howitzers moved into position last night and went into action today.

Roosevelt Visits
Island Of Malta

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Valletta, Malta, Dec. 10. (P)—President Roosevelt made a dramatic three-hour appearance on this bomb-scarred little British island in the Mediterranean Wednesday and paid tribute to its heroic defenders with presentation of an illuminated scroll.

Traveling from the series of historic conferences in the Middle East, the president dropped down from the clouds in a four-engine Douglas C54-transport plane at 9:50 in the morning, passed rapidly through a succession of ceremonies, and then, saying he had "many things to do," flew away again to an unannounced destination.

The Berlin radio said President Roosevelt might be headed for Spain to meet Generalissimo Franco, or to London. The president's movements as usual were secret.

The president's unprecedented visit here fulfilled what he described as a wish of many months as he presented a scroll on behalf of the American people saluting the defenders of Malta for "valorous service far above and beyond the call of duty" during the months of almost continual axis bombardment.

The scroll will be cast in bronze on Valletta's main square.

Among those with the president were Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Harry Hopkins, Admiral William D. Leahy, the president's chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Carl A. Spaatz, commander of the northwest African air forces.

The plane, handled by Maj. Otis Bryan, the president's personal pilot, was escorted by a score of Lightning and Spitfire fighters.

At the airport they were welcomed by Field Marshal Lord Gort, commander-in-chief of Malta, and a delegation of officials as well as by a military guard of honor and a band.

With Lord Gort the president stepped from his plane into a jeep named "Husky," one of three presented to the British on Malta by Eisenhower when Sicily was invaded, and was driven to the front of the guard of honor made up from men of an RAF unit, 50 British Marines, 50 Royal Navy men and 100 Maltese troops.

As the jeep came to a stop, the band played "The Star Spangled Banner." The president took the salute and then the American flag was raised on the staff behind the guard.

The president read the inscription on the scroll, which was dated Dec. 7, the day before his visit, the second anniversary of America's entry into the war.

In replying Lord Gort said the people of Malta were "very sensible of the greatness of this occasion" and that it was a day they never would forget.

Announcement of the president's visit to Malta was the first disclosure of his activities since he and Churchill conferred with President Ismet Inonu of Turkey at Cairo Dec. 4-6. Previously he and the prime minister had held conferences with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek at Cairo Nov. 22-26 and with Premier Stalin at Teheran Nov. 28-Dec. 1.

Hidden Reformatory Inmates Captured In Escape Attempt

Ionia, Mich., Dec. 10. (P)—Two 18 year old inmates of the state reformatory who hid successfully inside the institution for six days, subsisting on tomato juice, were captured today when they tried to scale a 15-foot outer wall.

Roy Anderson and Kenneth Basha had been missing since last Friday. Warden Joel K. Moore said they apparently were hiding in the basement of the reformatory's vocational school and retreated into a service tunnel when ever guards approached their hiding place.

Another two were using two lengths of pipe joined together in the effort to scale the outer wall when Harry Richmond, a guard, discovered them, Moore said. They surrendered without resistance after Richmond fired his rifle in the air to summon aid.

Anderson and Basha were sentenced from Detroit on breaking and entering charges.

Farm Workers May Get Higher Wages

Washington, Dec. 10. (P)—War Food Administrator Marvin Jones today became the arbiter of U. S. farm wages under $5,000 a year in a revision of rural wage policies ordered by Fred M. Vinson, director of economic stabilization.

The order, under certain conditions, opens the door to immediate wage increases for farm workers in the low-paid brackets.

MIGNANO CUT
TOWARD ROMEFIFTH ARMY HOLDS
MAIN HIGHWAY ON WINTER LINE

BY NOLAN NORGARD
Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Dec. 10. (P)—American and British troops in eight days of the bitterest fighting of the entire Italian campaign have isolated the German stronghold of Mignano guarding the valleys to Rome. It was announced today, and they now sit astride the main highway and railroad between that mountain fortress and Cassino, 10 miles to the northwest.

The Fifth Army's drive through the first terrible barrier of the Nazis' winter line was brought to a smashing climax yesterday when American infantry in savage hand-to-hand fighting above the clouds captured towering Mt. Samucro on the northern side of the strategic valley above Mignano and other Allied units stabbed forward into the enemy's secondary defenses before Cassino.

Peak Overlooks Villages
These thrusts forced the last stubbornly-resisting Germans to withdraw from the immediate vicinity of Mignano, which had been a "no man's land" for a week.

What the Germans had hoped would prove an impregnable line hinged on Mignano had been cracked in scarcely more than a week of savage fighting.

From Mt. Samucro's peak the American positions overlooked the strongly fortified villages of San Vittore and San Pietro, only six and seven miles, respectively, from Cassino.

Also captured in the final sweep of Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark's troops to nullify Mignano was Rocca D'Evandro, a strongly-defended village on the northwest slope of Mt. Camino. The Allies now firmly hold the entire eastern and southern bank of the Garigliano river from Rocca D'Evandro to its mouth, a distance of 14 air-line miles.

Canadians Make Gains
Accompanying news of the breakthrough above Mignano was a disclosure that Canadian forces had opened a major assault against enemy defenses on the Adriatic coastal sector of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army front and were making good progress with armored support.

The Canadians struck along an eight-mile front at 4 a. m. Wednesday after a heavy artillery bombardment. A strong enemy counterattack was beaten back Wednesday night, and yesterday the Canadians continued to push ahead against fierce German opposition. At some points they ran into elaborate and recently constructed enemy defenses, but pressed ahead systematically.

Measured in miles, the advance of Clark's American and British troops in the past eight days was not impressive, but by the yardstick of military accomplishment they achieved one of the outstanding successes of the Mediterranean war. At the point of deepest penetration from Calabria to the north.

Rules Relaxed On Censorship

News From War Fronts Not Affected By Liberalization

Washington, Dec. 10. (P)—America's censorship on the home front was liberalized in some respects today, but the changes do not affect the complete military control of all news from the fighting fronts.

Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship, eliminated a number of restrictive requests from the voluntary codes governing the press and radio, and expressed the opinion that the trend of censorship in the field covered by his civilian agency would be downward henceforth.

News from the actual war fronts is not affected by the code revisions, for there the army and navy continue in complete control of all news and correspondence are pledged to submit all matter for military censorship.

The voluntary codes continue to recognize this censorship-at-the-source.

Thus the code changes do not affect one major difficulty of American newspaper operations in wartime to date. That of military censorship abroad, which under the general term "for reasons of military security" can kill or bottle up many stories affecting operations of the armed forces.

Butch O'Hare Shot
Down Over Pacific
Saving Task Force

BY EUGENE BURNS

Aboard a U. S. Carrier in the Central Pacific, Nov. 29 (Delayed) —Lt. Commander Edward H. (Butch) O'Hare, famous fighter pilot, was shot down in a night air battle over the central Pacific two nights ago while American airmen were breaking up an attack of 30 or 40 Japanese torpedo planes on United States carrier force, his flying companions said today.

Stories told by a squadron commander, a fighter pilot, radioman and gunner, the last to see O'Hare in the air, were not in complete agreement. But the action was swift and in the darkness with the blinding of tracer fire and the flames from burning planes as the main illumination, so it was natural that none of them would know exactly what happened.

Butch landed at Tarawa, on the first carrier plane landing there since American conquest of the Gilbert Islands, to study the field. He also had a personal interest because he had "helicoptered" that area before and during the landing operations at Makin and Tarawa.

Since dawn of November 27 a relentless search for him has been conducted by carrier groups and by planes from Tarawa. The search allows for a 20-mile drift due to the heavy Gilbert currents. An area of 2,000 square miles has been crisscrossed, boxed and scouted.

Searching planes carried red dye markers and float lights and in their bomb bays a waterproof bag containing a radio kit and a shipwreck kit with food, water, cigarettes, fishing gear and blankets.

The reconstructed story of the men who flew with O'Hare, indicated that the lieutenant commander took one Jap torpedo plane down with him. It was his ninth.

But forever it will be remembered how Butch saved our task force from the heaviest and longest Japanese torpedo plane night attack.

Commenting on that action, Rear Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander of the task force, said: "Butch, with accompanying planes, saved my formation from certain destruction. I am recommending him for a second congressional medal of honor."

As I write on Lieutenant Commander O'Hare's ready room, an aviator drifts in and sits down, avoiding his comfortable black leather, reclining chair. The aviator stares dead ahead.

Without introducing the subject, he says: "Despite his great engines of destruction, enormous tanks, guns of battleships and carriers—it remains that one determined man can settle a battle."

Butch O'Hare's aide, Lieut. Wallace M. Parker of Pittsburgh, Pa., adds: "Butch did it twice."

O'Hare was awarded a congressional medal of honor for shooting down five Japanese planes, single handed, which attempted to attack the aircraft carrier Lexington in the south sea in 1942.

State Solon Seeks Way Out Of Prison, Asks For New Trial

Lansing, Dec. 10. (P)—Counsel for State Rep. Stanley J. Dombrowski today appealed for his liberation from prison, where he is serving a sentence on his plea of guilty to perjury before a grand jury investigating the legislature.

Circuit Judge Charles H. Hayden said he would hand down a decision Monday or Tuesday on the motion to set aside the sentence and grant a new trial.

Frank G. Schemanske, defense attorney, challenged the prosecution to analyze three widely conflicting stories Dombrowski has told, one of them under oath, and establish which if any of them is true. He contended that until the truth is known, Dombrowski could not logically be said to have committed perjury.

Serving a 3½ to 15-year sentence in the state prison of southern Michigan, Dombrowski was not in court today.

Bombers Continue Softening Up In Marshall Islands

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 10. (P)—Another softening up blow has been delivered against important Japanese aircraft bases in the Marshall Islands by Liberator bombers of the 77th army air force.

More than forty tons of bombs were unloaded on Jaluit and Mill atolls by the great four-engine bombers Wednesday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Both Jaluit and Mill atolls have air bases and there is a good seaplane base at Jaluit.

The 40-ton bombing attack on the two atolls was the second raid of the day.

Ted Hayhow Named Kelly Press Chief

Lansing, Dec. 10. (P)—E. C. (Ted) Hayhow of Davisburg, former city editor of the Pontiac Daily Press, today was appointed by Governor Kelly to serve as his temporary press secretary until the position is filled through civil service procedure.

Hayhow has served the past 18 months as publicity director for the state safety commission.

HITLER STOOGES
SEEK WAY OUT

Bulgaria Faces Crisis; Panicky Rumanians Leaving Cities

BY WADE WERNER

London, Dec. 10. (P)—Signs that Adolf Hitler's squirming satellites are seeking a way out of the war increased tonight as dispatches from neutral capitals pictured Bulgaria in the throes of a crisis and panicky Rumanians leaving cities in fear of air raids.

For the last two days there have been reports that the pro-German Bulgarian premier, Dobri Bozhilov, was struggling to patch up his shaky regime after a vote of no confidence.

Bulgaria's relations with Russia, with whom she is not at war—might provide an escape in spite of the fact that she is a co-belligerent with Germany against the United States and Britain.

In that connection the reported arrival of a new Russian military attaché in Sofia was regarded as significant.

Rumania is in the tightest spot of all the satellite states. After participating in the forward surge of Hitler's armies in 1941 and seeing much of her manpower slaughtered or captured in come-back drives of the Red army, she faces the prospect of being overwhelmed by Russian forces.

New Ration Tokens Come Out Feb. 27th

Washington, Dec. 10. (P)—Two billion dime-sized ration tokens will go into circulation February 27.

The Office of Price Administration (OPA) announced today the nation's shoppers will start trading ration stamps for the red and blue tokens at retail stores on that date but reminded everybody that the ration currency will supplement, not replace, the regular ration books.

Stamp strips will be torn off horizontally from ration books when the token plan becomes effective. Regardless of their present point number, each stamp will be good for 10 points under the new arrangement.

A regular schedule of validity dates will be established. Consumers will get 50 blue processed food points a month, and 30 meat, fats and butter red points semi-monthly. OPA said the tokens will make it unnecessary to issue ration books as frequently as at present.

Dafer Township Schoolhouse Burns

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 10. (P)—Fire at noon today destroyed the Dafer township school during a 38 mile blizzard. Loss was estimated at $8,000 covered to the extent of $5,000 by insurance.

Classes were not in session when the fire broke out, presumably from an overheated furnace. About 40 boys and girls attended the school and it is planned temporarily to establish classrooms in the town hall.

POSTAL CHIEF SENTENCED

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 10. (P)—James W. McCleary, 51, assistant postmaster of Dowagiac, today was sentenced by Federal Judge Fred M. Raymond to serve a one-to-three-year term in prison for embezzlement of postal funds.

A three-year sentence on a second count was suspended.

DNIEPER BEND
BATTLE RAGES
IN BLIZZARDSSOVIET DEFENDERS
FALL BACK EAST OF KOROSTEN

BY JAMES M. LONG

London, Dec. 10. (P)—The Russians announced today the capture of the heavily-fortified Ukrainian railway center of Znamenka and a continuing advance through blizzards in two directions in the Dnieper bend but to the north the great German counter-attack against the Kiev bulge, employing nearly 2,000 tanks, rolled the Soviet defenders back to a point 30 miles east of Korosten.

Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin announced the capture of Znamenka in a special order of the day, and the Soviet communiqué later told of further advances to the north in the direction of Kirovograd and to the south toward Krivoi Rog.

Bulge Reduced

But the communiqué, recorded by the Soviet Monitor, for the first time mentioned the town of Malin, 60 miles west of Kiev, and said large forces of German infantry and tanks attacking south of this town were repulsed.

Malin is just south of the Korosten-Kiev railway. If the Germans are to the south it indicates that the Kiev bulge, which once extended to Korosten and Zhitomir has been considerably reduced. Both Korosten and Zhitomir were taken back by the Germans earlier.

The Russians apparently still had forces at Chernyakhov, their westernmost reach in this area, some 80 miles west of Kiev but even this town was apparently outflanked for the Russians mentioned German counter-attacks northeast of Chernyakhov in which 92 German tanks were wrecked in 24 hours fighting.

Railroads Cut

In the Dnieper bend the Russians fighting through great blizzards entered Znamenka Thursday after cutting three of its four railways and closing into the suburbs from the north, south and east.

Continuing, they struck north to capture Kirovka on the junction of the Kirovograd railway and south to Chabanovka—a five mile advance down the rail line toward the iron mine center of Krivoi Rog.

Troops led by Gen. Ivan S. Konev, conqueror of Kremenchug and Dnepropetrovsk, were aided by air-born forces in an advance which appeared likely to hasten the crumbling of the entire Nazi middle Ukraine defenses.

Delta's Welfare Cost Last Year Topped All Other County Expenses

Cost of welfare and medical assistance in Delta county last year was greater than all other county government costs combined—including county administrative and operating expense, and the maintenance and construction of roads.

This is shown in figures contained in a "financial report of Michigan county government" for the year ending December 31, 1942, compiled by the auditor general's department.

In only one other county in the state, Houghton, does the cost of welfare and medical assistance exceed the total of other county government expenses.

According to a table showing comparative summary of per capita costs of county government functions, the gross cost of Delta county functions is $12.51. Of this total, $7.22 went for welfare and medical assistance and construction of highways; and only $2.02 went to county government administrative and operative expense.

How to Preserve Christmas Trees Told in Bulletin

Instructions on the care of Christmas trees are contained in a bulletin issued by the United States Forest Service.

One home method of preserving the Christmas tree, fragrant and green for the holiday season is to set the tree in a wide mouth bottle or crock which holds about a gallon of water. Mix five grams of citric acid and six grams of maleic acid or pectin in three quarters of water. When the tree is set up in the crock supported with small wires or other suitable supports add 15 grams of calcium carbonate to the acid solution and pour the whole solution into the crock. As the tree uses up the solution, add water.

These chemicals are inexpensive and this formula should serve the purpose for most species used as Christmas trees. Hemlock, however, is one tree which does not respond to this treatment.

Merely setting the Christmas tree with its butt in water will help to keep it fresh. Paring the butt with a knife before the tree is put in water will promote water absorption.

Mrs. Wiggin Will Conduct Classes On Price Control

Mrs. Ralph Wiggin, of the American Women's Voluntary Service, will conduct classes again today and this evening at the Delta hotel on war service and price control. As many women as possible are urged to attend these classes.

The classes will be conducted from 10 a. m. to noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The classes are conducted in two divisions, the first dealing with war service and the second with price control.

Members of the ration board price control staff attended the lectures yesterday.

Predicts U. P. Will Be Tourist Mecca

Marquette—A former Upper Peninsula resident, Robert Phillips, of West Lafayette, Ind., formerly of Vulcan, Mich., makes the prophecy that "after this war the Upper Peninsula will become one of the greatest resort regions in the United States."

He viewed the proposed purchase by the state of the Porcupine Mountain tract as a constructive step in the state's plan to attract tourists after the war.

"During the past 20 years I have driven through practically every scenic spot in America, taking pictures of the finest spectacles—Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Yosemite Valley, the Redwoods, Niagara Falls, and a host of others," the Indiana resident wrote in a letter to L. D. Randall, editor of the Norway (Mich.) Current. "But every time I return to Northern Michigan I am sure that more than ever I am impressed with the charm of its scenery. It would be hard to improve upon such views as the Straits of Mackinac, the Pictured Rocks, the Falls of the Tahquamenon, Hancock Hill and the Porcupine Mountains."

He warned peninsula resort interests to be ready for the "stream of tourists" who will bring a great deal of money to the peninsula, attracted by "its pleasant summers, extended lake shores, beautiful autumn colors and white winters."

RAILWAY PAY IN LAST WAR

Only 30% Of 15 Million Workers Belonged To Union Then

BY PETER EDSON
Escanaba Daily Press Washington Correspondent

Washington — For whatever parallels or prophecies you can make of them, there are some interesting contrasts and comparisons between the present railway labor-war demands and the railway labor wage adjustments made immediately before, during and after World War I.

The contrasts are principally these:

In World War I only about 30 per cent of the 1,750,000 railway employees were organized; today, close to 98 per cent of the 1,500,000 employees.

Then, the railroads were under government operation from December 1917, to March, 1920. Today they remain in private hands. They are specifically exempted from government seizure by the Smith-Connally act, but other war-powers acts would probably permit the President to order the roads taken over in case of strike or other emergency.

In World War I, there was no government machinery already established to mediate and adjust railway labor disputes. Today, there is the National Mediation Board set up by the Railway Labor Act of 1926 to handle just such cases. On top of this, to handle the 20 cents an hour wage increase demands made by the 15 non-operating unions for their 1,100,000 members last December, the President named an emergency panel to review a finding already made by the National Mediation Board, which had been unable to settle the dispute. The emergency panel awarded an 8 cents an hour increase.

Second Award
Director Fred M. Vinson of the Office of Economic Stabilization rejected the first panel award and a second presidentially appointed emergency panel was named to review the finding of the first panel. It has come through with awards varying from 4 cents an hour for higher paid workers, to 10 cents an hour for lower paid workers. A Senate resolution calls for setting aside this second award and returning to the first. In this situation, the 15 non-operating unions called for a strike vote.

Tracing the historical parallel, you must go back to the Adamson law, passed in September, 1916. This law, first established the eight-hour day for train and engine employees. Over the Adamson law was fought one of the bitterest battles in American labor history, leading right up to the eve of America's declaration of war the following April.

Railway labor groups had been negotiating for wage increases through the early part of 1916 and even before, on bases similar to those arguments advanced today—that railway labor wages have not advanced as fast as the cost of living nor as fast as increases in other industries, to which the railroads had been losing manpower. Conferences broke down in June on the eight-hour issue. In August, the brotherhoods reported 94 per cent of their membership favored strike. Faced by this threat, the "eight-hour" law was then introduced in Congress, passed quickly and signed.

Instead of settling the issue, however, passage of the law only served to stir up the dispute.

Total expenses of the sheriff's department for the year 1942 was $14,046.09, the report shows. Of the 11 counties, four had lower expense for their sheriff's department, six were higher.

The report shows that Delta county has the second largest investments in the 11-county group—a total of $30,284.29. Highest investment was in Van Buren county with $50,296. Delta county county has no outstanding bonded indebtedness.

Pegler Raps Communists In CIO Maritime Union

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York—From time to time these essays have revealed the hatred of the Communist-front National Maritime Union for the enlisted sailors and commissioned officers placed aboard merchant vessels to fight off submarines. This bitterness has expressed itself in sneers at the naval uniform derided as a monkey suit, heckling and taunts about the great disparity in pay for similar risks. Exposed in their campaign against the morale and loyalty of the fighting services, the Communists angrily denied incidents which are matters of official report in the Navy and Coast Guard records, and even set about incriminating themselves with the Navy men by collecting pools out of the high wages, which they offered the fighters as tips for beating off attacks by planes and submarines.

As proof of the attitude of this

Communist-front union toward the Navy, the Army as well, I cite herewith some remarks delivered to a meeting of the National Maritime Union of Nov. 18, by Joseph Curran, its president, who recently received from President Roosevelt an arbitrary draft deferment which places him beyond harm's reach for the duration of the war.

Curran had been discussing overtime pay, which is the principal concern of most civilian sailors of his union. Then he said: "Now we have another thing to report on today. The ships today are afflicted with 90-day wonders."

This contemptuous remark referred to the young Navy ensigns, mostly collegemen, who have been trained rapidly in the emergency and placed aboard merchant ships in command of the gun crews. The Communists laughed at the sneer. "They come from all over the country. Some of these workers are ensigns in command of a gun crew. (Laughter). The biggest gun they ever fired, some of them, was a hypodermic back in the woods some place. (Laughter). Then you have a guy who is known as a nurse's aid in some parts. He carries a manual in his pocket. He is a second lieutenant in the Army. (Laughter). Once in a while he has to read through the book and find something in the regulations to plague the crew with. (Laughter)."

"Lost in Crap Game"
"On this particular ship I want to tell you about the whole crew who was put under arrest for stealing Army property. We found that everyone on the ship with the exception of one or two were new boys who didn't know what it was all about. We went down and we looked over the gear that was supposed to have been stolen. There were a couple of GI jumpers that the soldiers had thrown away on the ship. There was another GI jumper that one guy had won in a crap game. (Laughter). Another one had on a shirt which was sold to him by a soldier. There were a couple of pairs of shoes which were too heavy for a soldier to wear so he left them. That is the extent of the gear for which the whole crew was going to be arrested. After we looked it over and were getting ready to defend the crew, the second lieutenant must have reconsidered and dropped all the charges against them."

"This gives you an indication of what you can run into. I would advise all members, don't buy any gear off a soldier. (Laughter and applause). Because if you do so, some second lieutenant right out of the—well, wherever he comes from (laughter) is going to have you on the carpet."

"In order to keep out from under second lieutenants and ensigns, don't take any of that gear and don't allow anybody to put

Hospital

Miss Elsie Lund of Old State Road, Mrs. Caroline Beck and Mrs. Jane Vanderlin of Escanaba, injured recently in an automobile accident, are improving and are now permitted to receive visitors at St. Francis hospital. Miss Lund suffered a double fracture of the collar bone and minor bruises; Mrs. Beck was bruised; and Mrs. Vanderlin suffered a fracture of the bones in her left hand and bruises. They will be confined to the hospital for five or six days.

Many railroads sought injunctions to stop enforcement. In retaliation, the unions threatened strikes if the law was not put into effect by Jan. 1, 1917.

Labor agreed to hold off on strikes and the railway management agreed to hold up all other suits until the Supreme Court could rule. Hearings were held in January. But the railway unions continued to use the strike threat without actually striking.

On March 13 a freight strike was called for March 17. On March 16 it was delayed 48 hours. On March 18 President Wilson announced that a strike must not be called because of the imminence of war, and on March 20 the Supreme Court finally handed down its decision upholding the Adamson law, thus settling the issue.

The wage issue involved in the Adamson law decision was not, however, settled by the Supreme Court decision. That came later, through settlement made by an emergency committee appointed by President Wilson, which awarded the train and engine service employees the same pay for eight hours work that was formerly given for 10 hours work. This was the start of the World War I wage increase awards, which will be considered further in this space, the next issue.

PERSONALS

On Being A Real Person

By Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick

The Part Religion Plays In Making Us Real Persons

Religion has never promised eminence, genius, freedom from hardship, satisfied ambition, or worldly success, but it has said to every individual: Whatever you may fail at, you need not fail at being a real person; the makings of great personal life include handicaps, deficiencies, troubles, and even moral failures; they too are raw materials out of which strong personalities are made; the universe itself is not a haphazard affair of aimless atoms but is organized around spiritual purposes; and personality, far from being a chance inadvertence, is the fullest and completest way of being alive and the most adequate symbol we have of the nature of God; the world itself is a 'vale of soul-making,' and he who undertakes that task is on the main highway of creation's meaning and is accepting the central trust of life.

Moreover, says religion, as there are personality-creating forces in the universe—else we would not be here—so there are forces that can recreate and empower us, enabling us to endure what we have to stand and become what we ought to be.

This message of religion has been phrased in many forms by differing temperaments, and has been variously embodied in the creeds and customs of the churches. Undergirding faith in a God who cares; the consciousness of available power from beyond ourselves; the practice of prayer as a means of communion with the Eternal Spirit; belief in a criterion of judgment higher than man's, which looks not on the outward appearance but on the heart; confidence in the reality of forgiveness, not only human but divine; faith in the eternal significance of life as headed toward a purposeful goal ultimately worth all that it may cost, in achieving which every person may count; belief in personality's survival of death so that to be a real person is of more than temporal concern—such factors in religious faith focus their strong influence on the individual as he decides whether to accept himself as done for or to accept himself as potentially a worth-while person.

One of the ablest women in this country, herself a university graduate and the wife of a university president, was brought up in poverty. She never saw the inside of a schoolroom until she was 14 years old. She recalls when, as a girl, she complained of her hardships, and her mother, who was of pioneer stock, turned on her.

"See here," said the mother, "I have given you life; that is about all I will ever be able to give you—life. Now you stop complaining

The Golden Text (II Thessalonians 3:3) is: "The Lord is faithful, who shall establish you, and keep you from evil."
Among the Bible citations is this passage (Psalm 55:16,17): "As for me, I will call upon God; and the Lord shall save me. Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud; and he shall hear my voice."
Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 15): "Christians rejoice in secret beauty and bounty, hidden from the world, but known to God. Self-forgetfulness, purity, and affection are constant prayers. Practice not profusion, understanding not belief, gain the ear and right hand of omnipotence, and they assuredly call down infinite blessings."

NOW that the tumult of accusations, about unfair methods of handling the news of the recent international war conferences, has died away and even before the war strategy, mapped at those conferences, is made apparent, there's a feeling among the people of the United States that a momentous step has been taken in cementing, in the closest possible relationship, all of the principal Allied governments.

We may not particularly like some of the supercilious trimmings, that it is reported followed these conferences and a lot of people in America find it hard to understand just why an ordinary domestic politician like Harry Hopkins should be tagged along with President Roosevelt, it is certainly true that these meetings served to definitely remove any cloud of doubt, particularly as to the relationship of Russia with her allies, that may have existed before.

Columnists and radio commentators for months had been spouting grave fears as to the measure of cooperation that would be given by Russia to her allies in either the mapping of a war program or in post war collaboration. But Joe Stalin attended those conferences, in person. He was friendly and cooperative, in mapping both the strategy for winning the war and in effecting the most important post-war agreements. Russia's full participation in those conferences has definitely laid the bugaboo of international doubt as to the kind of a government Joe Stalin is running, over there.

With that doubt removed the international situation, from an Allied viewpoint, has been most materially and helpfully clarified.

No Haven for Gangsters

WHEN President Roosevelt and other United Nations leaders served notice on neutral nations that they were not to offer sanctuary to Nazi leaders and other Axis war criminals they apparently meant it.

The issue, at least, has not been forgotten. Just this week, Viscount Simon, chairman of the United Nations commission for investigation of war crimes, declared in London there is no such thing in international law as a right of asylum attaching to an individual.

When the first pronouncement was made on this question, some of the small neutral nations indicated their displeasure. Their attitude was to the effect that whatever they did in the way of offering asylum to refugees was their own business. It is true that the United States also has been a sanctuary for many political refugees in past years. These refugees fled from religious and political persecution and other forms of tyranny in their own country. But this does not mean that any country should help the tyrants, themselves, in escaping justice. Those who commit tyranny need a different kind of attention than those who are their victims.

Why Favor Gamblers?

THE senate finance committee has rejected a house-approved proposal to impose a five per cent tax on pari-mutuel betting, but has adopted a provision for doubling the taxes on movie tickets and admissions to other forms of entertainment.

Just why the committee favored the horse race gambling racket is hard to understand. Anyone who engages in pari-mutuel wagering places little value on money, anyhow, and the five per cent tax would hardly be noticed. Admissions to movies and lyceum courses, such as the Escanaba Town Hall series, are now taxed 10 per cent, and would be raised to 20 per cent under the provisions of the new tax bill.

Perhaps, the horse race interests have a better organized lobby in Washington than the moviegoers.

Build Roads Again

HIGHWAY and street improvement programs costing over $400,000,000 have been mapped by state, county and city units for postwar projects, according to a report submitted by State Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler to the State Planning Commission.

Such projects proved to be the most practical of the work relief programs that were inaugurated during the depression. They provide work for untrained laborers, who are usually among the first to be thrown out of employment in economic upheavals. The highways that were built in the Upper Peninsula, for instance, were actually self-liquidating investments, for the expenditure of money by tourists, attracted here by good roads, more than repaid the cost of construction. When the war suddenly comes to an end, there is quite likely to be a temporary displacement of labor as the industries reconvert from wartime to peacetime production. Among the projects that will be launched to fill the employment gap the building of fine highways and streets will likely again top the list.

Another Epidemic

THOSE who still remember the devastating effects of the influenza epidemic during the first World War are displaying some concern over the wave of "upper respiratory infection" cases reported in the Middle West. Public health officials report the ailment is not influenza and not the so-called heavy cold, although it has the symptoms of each, including soreness and aches throughout the body, sometimes sore throat, a slight fever and respiratory distress. The advice to victims of the unnamed infection is to go to bed, get plenty of rest, avoid stuffy rooms, eat lightly and consult the doctor.

OLEO IS GOOD FOOD (Milwaukee Journal)

Scientists at the University of Wisconsin, after long and painstaking experiments with rats, come to the tentative conclusion that vitamin fortified oleomargarine is a wholesome food, nutritionally equal in most respects to butter. So far as they can now determine, adults at least should thrive quite as well on margarine as on butter.

So that is that. With these findings, and others of similar purport from other university laboratories, the old argument that margarine is a deleterious substance, quite unsuitable for use as food, passes completely. With it should pass the idea that the public interest demands that sale of margarine be restricted, through prohibitive taxation or otherwise.

Publication of the findings at this time should be of assistance to the legislature when next month is approached the question of repeal of Wisconsin's heavy oleo taxes. Oleo is being sold widely in the state at this time, despite the tax of 15c a pound, because of the extreme present shortage and consequent high point value of butter. Users find it palatable, and, when colored, not unattractive. They want the tax removed, and it should be removed.

The dairy farmer, who has consistently fought repeal on various grounds, now finds himself in the position of opposing the scientific facts. Wisdom would suggest that he back down, for no group has for long been able to legislate to halt progress in the field of nutrition or in any other field.

The farmer has a right to demand that oleo be properly marketed. At the moment, his rights would seem to stop there. His objection to the use of yellow coloring in margarine has never been a really valid one, if only from the fact that dairymen were the first to resort to this artificial "eye appeal." Much good Wisconsin butter would be a lot whiter than it is if nature alone provided the color.

MOST TIMELY XMAS GIFT (Michigan Manufacturer)

With the nation engulfed in the throes of a world-wide war, and determined efforts being made on many sides to halt the threat of disastrous inflation, the current holiday shopping season is witnessing an unusual merchandising practice. With money abundant and merchandise supplies scarce, retail stores are vying with banks in stressing the purchase of War Bonds for Christmas gifts this year. Instead of the customary gifts of merchandise and other manufactured articles.

Overcrowded retail markets, excess demands for merchandise of all kinds, and the prevalent trend toward purchase of gift articles at any price, are all factors hastening the appearance of an inflation flood. In the face of these factors, merchants, bankers and retailers of every kind are doing their Government and all those engaged in the war a noteworthy and patriotic service in urging, in paid advertising columns, that the patriotic thing to do this Christmas is to "give War Bonds."

Affairs run in cycles. This year we have a shortage of fuel, but 1944 is a campaign year and there'll be lots of hot air.

The public is more or less familiar with such expressions as "leftist," "left-wing," "swing to the left," in designating political or governmental departure from conservative, established procedure or custom. But why "left"?

We must seek the answer in antiquity when the word for "left" implied "evil, wrong, perverse, unfavorable." Indeed, the Latin word for "left" is sinister, which today in English means "underhand, corrupt, adverse, threatening evil." The right was considered to be the lucky, fortunate side. Hence the meaning of the English word right: "fit, correct, proper." The Latin word is dexter, from which we have such words as dexterous, dexterity.

In French, the word for right is droite, from which we have the word droit, meaning "dexterous, skillful." The word

The World Today

BY JAY C. HAYDEN

North American Newspaper Alliance Washington—The statement of Senator Josiah W. Bailey of North Carolina, that "we can form a southern Democratic party and vote as we please in the electoral college"—made with virtually the whole southern membership grouped closely around him—may rank among the most prophetic political declarations ever made on the floor of the United States Senate.

Two circumstances have brought a great advance in southern insurgency against Roosevelt and the New Deal.

The first of these was the soldier vote bill, sponsored by two northern Democrats, Senators Scott W. Lucas of Illinois and Theodore F. Green of Rhode Island, which the southerners believe was deliberately designed to rob their states of election control. It was a charge by Senator Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania that this bill had been beaten by an "unholy combination of northern Republicans under the leadership of Joe Pew, and of southern Democrats under the leadership of Harry Byrd," the precipitated Senator Bailey's third party threat.

—G. O. P. VICTORY IN KENTUCKY— The second event influencing southern opinion was last month's Kentucky elections, and particularly the congressional bi-election in the fourth district of that state.

That district is southern and rural. The explanation of its more than 3-to-2 election of a Republican representative, as the southerners see it, is that the poor folks in their section, no less than the upper classes, now have turned against the Washington administration.

For years the top-ranking politicians and industrialists in the south have been in a mood of revolt, but they have not dared to move because they believed the southern rank and file still was overwhelmingly loyal to President Roosevelt. Now, for the first time, the southern leaders are envisioning the possibility that the same sort of mass uprising of their people is under-way as carried five southern states—Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and Texas—for Herbert Hoover in 1928.

Whereas the advocates of a southern Democratic bolt, in the event President Roosevelt runs for a fourth term, had all but given up two months ago, talk of such a bolt in the southern Democratic circle today is much stronger than it ever has been before.

There is still another factor promoting this trend. It is that recent elections have convinced the southern Democratic congressmen that the odds, in any event, are against their party retaining either the presidency or congressional control next year. Hence they reckon they have nothing to lose in committee chairmanships and other personal perquisites by staging an intra-party insurrection.

—SOUTH BOLTED IN 1924—

The incompatibility of the southern and northern city Democrats has been in evidence for a long time. It was the basic cause of the bitter fight at Madison Square Garden in 1924, which resulted in defeat of an anti-Ku Klux Klan resolution by a fraction of one vote. This in turn led to the southern bolt in 1928 which gave Gov. Al Smith the most sweeping defeat any Democratic presidential candidate ever has suffered.

President Roosevelt's nomination healed this schism and he kept it healed for more than ten years by offsetting his strong pro-labor union and pro-Negro policies, favored in the northern cities, with a flood of doles for the southern masses. The old sectional antagonism smoldered through this period and frequently flamed into conflict, but never sufficiently to endanger Mr. Roosevelt's electoral majority.

Intensification of the intra-party feud now can be traced principally to changes wrought by the war. The south no longer is being sugared with doles and coincidentally it is suffering from many governmental discomforts. Shortened labor supply has intensified the race issue. Southern farmers particularly have been irked by the scarcity of hands and this is added to by a multitude of rationing contents. There has been a growing tendency to charge all these conditions to Mrs. Roosevelt's social agitations, coupled with labor union domination of the federal government.

The northern Democrats, meanwhile, attribute their recent defeat at the polls to the anti-New Deal attitudes of their southern brothers. The northerners have struck back with such retaliatory measures as the anti-lynching and anti-poll tax bills.

Neither of these disturbed the southern Democrats very much initially because they set the stage for filibusters which were popular with southern voters. When poll tax repeal was offered as a condition of soldier voting, however, it was a horse of another color, and even more the southerners were angered by the soldier voting bill itself as latterly introduced. These measures are hard to resist without inviting the implication that their opponents are against soldier voting per se.

The soldier voting bill is not the real cause of the Democratic party feud but it may prove the final straw that turned this feud into a political revolution.

A Washington columnist observed recently, "In this regard, President Roosevelt is swinging sharply to the right." That is to say, in the matter under discussion the President had previously been a leftist (a liberal), but had swung over to a conservative viewpoint.

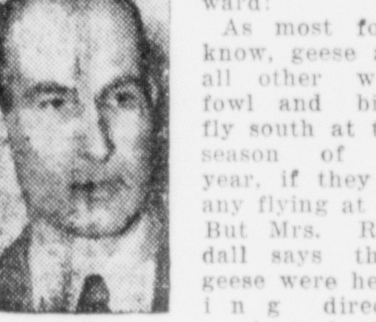

No Place to Go but Around and Around

Good Morning!

By The Bugler

MIXED UP—It may or may not be a sign of the times, but Mrs. James Randall of 1615 Washington avenue, reports seeing a large flock of geese flying—of all things—northward!

Donathan

As most folks know, geese and all other wild fowl and birds fly south at this season of the year. If they do any flying at all. But Mrs. Randall says these geese were heading directly north, and just in case there is any doubt about it, reports that six other persons saw them too.

This oddity was observed at about 8:30 in the morning. As Mrs. Randall points out, however, the geese were probably flying north to avoid a storm and their deviation from the normal southern course was only temporary. They've probably got straightened out long ago, are now flapping happily around in a warmer climate.

SERVICE PLUS—Talking the other day with Bevler Butts, Escanaba's recreational director, The Bugler learned the city's recreation program has more to it than meets the casual eye. You will be surprised, as was The Bugler, at the amount of community service this department gives.

It is Bev's contention (and he's proving it's right) that plenty of opportunities exist for community service aside from routine activities of the recreation department. Just for fun Bev kept track of some of these services in November—which is a run-of-the-mill average for the other 12 months of the year.

During the past month the city recreation center was used 10 times for activities not a part of the regular activity schedule. Those meetings included meetings of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, Chicago & North Western Pension Club, Royal Neighbors, Jefferson PTA, and for two private parties on Saturday nights. Incidentally, The Bugler has heard several persons who attended the Jefferson PTA party at the recreation center compliment the committee for its selection of a convenient meeting place.

Also during the past month the recreation department made five loans of its equipment, planned one party, directed one party, prepared one new bulletin and answered a request for a special bulletin, rented equipment in two cases, and seven parties were sponsored at the ski hill. Besides this Director Butts gave a talk on recreation programs to a Gladstone audience. Altogether about one community service a day for the month of November—not bad at all. And this outside of the regular schedule.

Come to think of it—that's one way to get a little extra dividend on those tax dollars the city spends for its recreation program.

DEAR BUGLER—In the Daily Press of Saturday, Dec. 4, there was a news article warning shoppers to keep their purses and purses in their possession at all times and not to leave them on a counter or on the floor in a store and then walk away.

We are not so likely to place our packages or purse on the counter—for seldom does the merchant leave a spot clear on his counter to lay anything down while you get your money out of your purse to pay for the merchandise. So a person has to place packages on the floor while you hold your purse.

I'd say, write an article advising the merchants to clean their counters off so we women wouldn't have to put our packages and everything on the floor.

I also want to thank the person who wrote about leaving the crossword puzzles out of the paper. It makes us fans boil to miss one—and then get an answer to the one we didn't get.

Gladstone Reader.

Dear Gladstone Reader: You have a real suggestion there for the merchants. While The Bugler realizes there may be reasons why it can't be done, at first glance he would say the merchant who is thoughtful enough to keep adequate counter space clear for his trade, would be going a long way toward inviting customers to call again.

Nowadays the tendency is to pile every available bit of counter space with salables. This leaves no space for the American woman and her over-night-bag-size purse to come to rest on a shopping tour of the store. If she has accumulated a few packages, her discomfort becomes more acute.

To see a woman juggling six packages and a purse while trying to make change is a sad spectacle indeed. The solution is just as you have proposed—more cleared counter space.

Of course there are unsympathetic men who will say that women's catch-all purses never were designed to carry money in. But this is a personal matter. The American woman spends most of the nation's income, as any man will tell you. Therefore she should be treated with consideration by the merchant as his best customer—and be given as much counter space as she needs.

The Bugler.

FARMERS VS. PROFITS

What with higher feed prices, subsidies and talk of inflation, the farmers are supposed to have struck a bonanza. But what to Delta county farmers have to say? One farmer told The Bugler he was sick of this "big profits on the farm" talk—that pork chops that cost 60 cents a pound in the butcher shop sell on the hoof for 12 cents. The Bugler would be glad to hear from local farmers on this question.

NEW YORK—The Teheran dispatch, quoting Stalin as saying that victory would be impossible without American production, reminded Joe E. Lewis of this story: After A. Averill Harriman had completed his first mission to Moscow Lewis saw him at the Copacabana ringside. "Averill," Lewis asked him, "what did Joe say to you?" "Stalin said 'Thanks,'" said Harriman. "You mean 'Thanks,' like in 'Thanks, you're welcome?'" asked Lewis. "No," replied Harriman. "Just 'Thanks,' like in 'Thanks, Planes and Guns.'"

Alfred Drake, who plays the lead in "Oklahoma," reports for induction today. His role, one of the most coveted on Broadway, will go to an unknown, Bob Kennedy, who never before has been on the stage.

A FEW DAYS ago the Navy reported that the famous submarine, "Wahoo," is missing. The "Wahoo" was commanded by the 36-year-old Commander "Mush" Morton, whose favorite hunting ground was Tokyo Bay. Commander Bolton, the Navy's West Coast public relations officer, learned that "Mush" Morton's wife was trying to reach him by phone. Bolton delayed answering the call, fearing to answer the hopeless questions he was sure she wanted to ask him. After two days, Bolton finally answered the phone. "I'm calling," said Mrs. Morton, true to tradition of the Navy, "to get the names and addresses of the wives of the 'Wahoo' crew. I want to write letters to all of them."

THE SATURDAY EVENING

POST will institute a change in policy next month, in the publication of Ivan Dmitri's war-photos spread, without any text. Because "The Voice of the Turtle," which opens tonight, is an assured success, and because there are only three in the cast—Margaret Sullivan, Elliott Nugent and Audrey Christie—the dressing rooms at the Morosco Theatre have been converted into elegant suites for each complete kitchenette. Arthur Rubinstein was asked for his autograph by a youngster who then asked: "What are you?" Rubinstein said: "I'm a pianist. If you didn't know me, why did you ask for my autograph?" The autograph hunter confessed: "I wanted your autograph because you look funny."

LESS THAN two years ago an unknown young comic then making his first professional appearance at Cafe Society Uptown, went to the offices of Wharton & Gable, theatrical producers, to apply for a role in "Cafe Crown." Ella Kazan, the director, gave him an audition and made the usual answer, "File your name with the girl. We'll call you if we need you." This week the same comic, Zeppo Mostel, again met Kazan—who asked him to play the leading role in the Franz Werfel-Clifford Odets play, "Jaczobowski and the Colonel," which he is directing for the Theatre Guild.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington—Two-fisted Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, no friend of the Roosevelt Administration, summed up the soldier-vote bill situation when he said that the Eastland substitute would "make it practically impossible for absentee Michigan servicemen to vote."

Pearson

"A man is entitled to vote as well as to fight," concluded Vandenberg. One thing he had in mind is the fact that most State legislatures are not scheduled to meet next year, and a number will not meet until after elections. Therefore, it is a safe bet that few legislatures would act on the recommendation of the Eastland Bill to pass absentee soldiers' vote legislation.

Vandenberg's statement, together with the fight waged by Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, co-author of the original soldier-vote bill, were among the few high points of statesmanship in one of the worst debacles of democracy so far seen among the so-called statesmen of the U. S. Senate.

In contrast, there were many low points, one of them stirred up by white-thatched Senator James M. Tunnell of Delaware, who declared of the Eastland substitute: "If the Senate does not want the boys to vote, let it say so fearlessly. Let us not use a subterfuge and pretend we are giving them something when we are not."

To this, Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina replied:

"Doesn't the Senator believe his State is patriotic enough—as are other States—to call a special session of the legislature to provide an opportunity for the precious boys to vote?"

Raging with fury, Tunnell shot back: "Why does the Senator speak so sarcastically by saying 'the precious boys?'"

Smith sputtered in confusion, did not answer the question. Finally regaining his composure after the emotional slip-up, the South Carolinian asked Tunnell if it would be "impossible" to call special sessions of State Legislatures. Tunnell replied that it would be "impossible to get the soldiers to vote in accordance with the proposed substitute, and no one knows it any better than the Senator from South Carolina."

"I do not know any such thing," replied Smith meekly.

"Then the Senator doesn't know as much as he should know," countered Tunnell amid laughter from the galleries.

Note: Only Northern Democrats who voted against a clean-cut voting system for soldiers were Walsh of Massachusetts, Walsh of New Jersey (Gov. Edison's new appointee from his own Edison Company), and Rhode Island's Peter Gerry, millionaire descendant of the Gerry who signed the Declaration of Independence.

—RED ARMY TO PAUSE—

The Big-Three conference is sure to be followed by a lull on the Russian front. Military experts agree that the Red Army will pause to gather strength for the coordinated blow against Germany from the east, west, and south.

Weather will play some part in this lull, for Russian roads are now boggy. But principal factor will be the need to gather forces for the winter drive, timed to strike Germany at the same time as the invasion of western Europe, and a possible operation against the Balkans.

The Red Army has advanced so far that lines of supply are stretched thin, and large areas between the fighting front and the bases of supply are ravaged by the sea-saw of armies. Roads must be built, wires strung, and rail lines changed back from the German to the Russian gauge.

Thus, the Russian forces will be doing more engineering than fighting in the next few weeks.

—ONE MAN—WENDELL WILLKIE—

Here are the inside facts behind the isolationist book, "One Man—Wendell Willkie, a critical take-off on Willkie's 'One World,' brought out as a part of the Stop-Willkie campaign.

The author, C. Nelson Sparks, former Mayor of Akron, Ohio, did most of the writing, but the office of Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota and a former secretary of Herbert Hoover had a hand in the book's preparation.

Gerald W. ("Spike") Movius, long-shanked, magazine-writer secretary of Senator Nye, ghost-wrote the first chapter and part of another, also assisted in editing the book. The original manuscript was submitted for suggested changes to both Movius and Ray Richmond, executive secretary of Hoover's "National Committee on Food for Small Democracies," which folded up just before Pearl Harbor.

Another who had a hand in the actual writing was George Briggs, a Minneapolis free-lance writer who served on Sparks' publicity staff while the latter was promoting the campaign of Frank Gannett, New York newspaper publisher, for the GOP Presidential nomination in 1940.

The book, a colored narrative of alleged incidents in Willkie's political career—including his story-book nomination by the Philadelphia Republican convention in 1940—is aimed at stamping Willkie as a political accident. It is published by E. C. Rayner, a small New York publisher who went to high school with Sparks in Ohio, according to friends.

Sparks tried to get Publisher Gannett to "angel" the work, but Gannett apparently didn't consider it a good business proposition. The author finally had to put up about $4,000 of his own money. The rest of the initial publishing cost was supplied by the Rayner firm.

Sooner or later the news of the Roosevelt-Stalin-Churchill conference will be turned loose—on Germany.

Importance Of Woods Worker Told By USES

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of stories on a crisis that must be met at once in the woods, sawmills, paper mills and other similar Michigan industries. These articles have been written by S. F. Wagner, manager of the Escanaba office of the War Manpower Commission's United States Employment Service.

Few songs have been written about the men who work day after day in zero weather, cutting down timber in the woods of Michigan, Wisconsin and other states where logging is big business. No medals have been pinned on the chests of the men who haul these logs to the sawmills, to those who cut an extra cord of pulp wood when they can spare the time between farm chores. But it is a mighty war service that these men are performing, which is speeding the day when our soldiers and sailors can come home to do the jobs of peace. The big trouble is there aren't enough men to do the work. That means we aren't getting enough logs, enough pulp wood, enough veneer or enough paper to keep our war machine humming at top speed.

Here are the main facts about work in the woods and in the mills which use the timber that comes out of these woods. Unless more men will take jobs in the woods and in the mills, aircraft production will slow up, shipment of war goods to our boys overseas will be delayed because of a shortage of crates, newspapers will get smaller and smaller in size and a thousand needs for timber can not be met.

Wood Has Many Uses
Working in the woods, in saw mills and other plants which use timber is just as important as making Liberator bombers or battleships. For if there were no wood, the battleship might never be finished, the Liberator bomber would need to use more of the precious metals which are getting scarcer every day as the war continues and demand grows.

How are timber and its products used in the war effort? If we answer that question in this article, it may inspire some of you who read the story to take woods jobs. And that is the whole purpose of this series, of this and other articles to follow.

The war has forced us to use wood more than ever before, as stores of precious metals in the South Pacific and elsewhere have been seized by our enemies. Take a battleship or any naval vessel for example. Thousands of their parts are made not of steel, but of wood. Before men can be landed from a ship or supplies sent to the armies ashore, wooden docks and bridges often have to be built. Shelter for soldiers demands wood in climates in which trees do not grow. Dressed timber alone takes the steady work of many thousands of woods and saw mill workers.

Look at the photographs of our supplies being shipped throughout the world. Machines and materials are crated in wood, to assure their safe arrival where they will be needed. Cartons of wood, crates of wood, all speed the products of our arsenals of democracy to the place where they are needed.

Veneer Used in Planes
Look at the plans for our aircraft. Veneer has replaced metals in many places. It is the material of a thousand uses. It can be produced in necessary quantities only if we have more men in the woods, in the saw mills, in the veneer plants.

Look at this newspaper. It has fewer pages this year than it had last. The reason is there isn't enough pulp wood being cut to supply the newspapers with the paper they need to tell you of the progress of this war, of the way your boys are winning glory for themselves and for you.

Look at the reports of scarcity of the war chemicals which are made from wood. Remember that if the war supplies made from wood chemicals aren't produced in the quantities which we need there may be other Bataans, other defeats that could be avoided if we had enough of these chemicals. Think of all these needs and then read the next article of this series which will deal with the manpower needs of the woods and their related industries.

See Shortage Of Lutfisk

Lutfisk, the piece de resistance for Christmas eve suppers for many, particularly Scandinavians, will not be as plentiful as in the last two years. The entire stock of North-west dealers had its source in Iceland, the lutfisk supplies of Norway having been cut off since the invasion of that country by the Nazis.

The traditional Yuletide delicacy is received by dealers in the dried form and then processed for the retail market. Lutfisk is derived from Atlantic codfish.

Although ration-free, OPA ceilings govern the maximum price for lutfisk.

Clamming Industry Declines In State

Lansing—The "clamming" industry, 15 years ago worth a half million dollars annually, has dwindled to the point where the income is negligible according to the fish division of the conservation department. Conforming with a recommendation of the division, the conservation commission at its December meeting ordered a five year closed season on the taking of mussels in 35 southern Michigan counties.

"In addition to over-intensive clamming, pollution and the development of power dams are factors that are apparently responsible for the present low production and disinterest on the part of operators," Fred A. Westerman, chief of the fish division told the commission. "It is hoped that a more intensive study of the factors responsible for the apparent depletion in the supply of mussels can be made as soon as trained personnel is again available."

In 1938, because of the depletion of mussels, the season was shortened from three months to one month. There will be no open season for the next five years, as the result of the Commission's action. Clam shells taken from southern Michigan rivers were used extensively for making shirt buttons.

LARGE JANUARY CALL EXPECTED

Next Induction Group Will Include Many Fathers

The Delta county draft board yesterday received its tentative notice of call for January. Upon the basis of the tentative notice, the January quota for this county will be somewhat smaller than December, but the call nevertheless is considerably larger than the number of men actually delivered to the induction station this month. The January call is expected to exceed 100 men.

The local board was considerably short of its large December quota but the board staff reported yesterday that it is probable that the January call will be filled completely. The actual call will probably be received in a week or ten days but the tentative notice is given monthly prior to the actual notice so that the local boards can plan accordingly.

In contrast to the December induction group, which included only a sprinkling of pre-war fathers, the January call will probably be filled predominately with pre-war fathers.

Despite the fact that President Roosevelt yesterday signed legislation designed to put pre-war fathers at the bottom of the induction pool, it is not considered likely that the legislation will have any material effect upon the drafting of fathers. The bill, however, does eliminate the drafting of men in non-deferrable occupations in advance of other men in category four. Several so-called "non-deferrables" were sent to the induction station this month from the local board.

The board also announced yesterday that it has been unable to locate George Albert Kay, whose last known address is in Pontiac, Mich. Anyone knowing of the present whereabouts of this registrant is asked to notify the local board.

Taxes Sought To Put Whisky In Circulation

BY JACK BELL
Washington, Dec. 10. (AP)—Quick tax action to force millions of gallons of whisky out of warehouses, and relaxation of WPB rules to permit distillers to manufacture liquor five days each month were urged tonight by the chairman of a senate committee investigating current liquor shortages.

Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind.) made these personal recommendations after hearing testimony that bonded warehouses are bulging with 117,000,000 gallons of whisky and that there is widespread hoarding, all down the line from distillery to consumer. The hearing also produced charges that black market operations are rife and that state-owned liquor stores are getting less than others.

Asserting that Canadian breweries are being permitted to operate on a rotating schedule which permits them to manufacture whisky for three weeks and then return to war alcohol production, Van Nuys said he thought American firms should be allowed five days each month to turn out potables. (They now are devoted wholly to war production.)

He told reporters he was convinced that if this measure were linked with an immediate tax on distilled spirits which have been in warehouses four years or more, whisky would come back into the market in quantity. At present the tax applies after eight years in storage.

Van Nuys voiced these observations:

- 1.—That distillers are "arbitrarily setting aside 100,000,000 gallons of bonded whisky for post-war purposes."
- 2.—Liquor "hoarding" by distillers, wholesalers, retailers, and individuals—"many of them persons who never drink a drop"—is contributing to a "black market."

Van Nuys registered his complaints during a recital by Stewart Berkshire, deputy commissioner of internal revenue, of government tax controls.

Berkshire furnished the figures showing that there is 117,000,000 gallons of whisky from four to eight years old in bonded warehouses.

The distillers, yet to be heard by the committee, contend that shelves are bare because they aren't making any whisky, they are producing war alcohol and also they can get only 65 per cent of the normal supply of bottles.

Van Nuys said the committee's next moves would deal largely with these proposals:

- 1.—Cutting the tax exempt storage period from a maximum of eight years to four. (The committee estimated this would produce one billion dollars in taxes in a short time.)

Periodical respite from the manufacture of war alcohol, in which the distillers could produce whisky.

Greater use of corn in distillation.

Closer supervision of liquors after they leave bonded warehouses.

The relative merits on labeling, warehouse certificates, capitol stock transactions and importations.

Allied Headquarters, Algiers (by wireless)—The Army mess where I used to eat during frequent visits to Algiers was staffed at one time by soldier-waiters. Then later we had French girls, and now upon my return our waiters are Italian prisoners. And they are in fact the best we've had.

They're terribly attentive, and grin all the time, apparently because they're so happy with their jobs. They don't speak English, and a very few of us speak Italian, so a very neat system of dining-table communications has been devised.

Each place has a little typed menu, with each dish numbered. With it is a tiny slip of paper with numbers running up about 15. So you simply take a pencil and circle the numbers of whatever you want and hand the slip to the waiter.

Pretty soon he comes back with exactly what you ordered, no matter how illogical your appetite may have been. They simply never make a mistake that way. I think we ought to try it at home.

Private George McCoy used to do a daily buttonhole broadcast for WEAJ on the steps of the Astor Hotel in New York. The program was called "The Real McCoy." Now he's on the staff of the Stars and Stripes doing the same thing—buttonholing soldiers on the streets and having them talk into the microphone.

He calls the present program "The Sidewalks of North Africa." Just before I went home last fall, George buttonholed me and got me up to his studio and made some kind of record for broadcasting to the soldiers.

I don't know what I said, because it was the second time in my life I'd ever done such a thing, and I was so scared I can't remember, but anyhow I got through it and the recording was

GLADSTONE

12,000 Acres Timber Bought By Local Firm

Purchase of a 12,000 acre tract of hardwood timber in the northern part of Luce county by the Northwestern Veneer and Plywood corporation of this city is announced by S. R. Venne, president and general manager of the company.

The tract has been known to timber men for years as the Ches-brough holdings. It was acquired from its more recent owners, Louis and Kirjmaier of Toledo, Ohio.

Present plans of the company are to ship the timber to Gladstone for processing, Mr. Venne states.

The Northwestern Veneer and Plywood corporation now operates a camp near MacMillan in Luce county where it does some selective logging on Cleveland-Cliffs company property under an arrangement with that firm.

The logs are trucked to Corrine, west of Gould City, for shipment on the Soo Line railroad to Gladstone.

Only mature timber is cut, the smaller trees being left standing to develop for future operations. Veneer logs come to Gladstone, softwood cuttings are sold to the Barrett Lumber company of Newberry while chemical wood goes to the Cleveland-Cliffs plant at Marquette.

WORK ON SLIP WALKS RUSHED

City Crews Are Working On Elevated Walks Between Slips

Work of constructing substantial footwalks between the slips is being carried on daily by city workmen in an effort to complete the projects before too much snow sets in.

Bridges are now in good condition, it is reported, and the present project calls for the construction of walks between the bridges.

The walks are being built on cedar posts sunk into the ground. Walk level will be almost two feet above the surface in order to provide clearance during high water in the spring. Unless the water rises well above the normal spring flood stage, the new footwalks will be sufficiently high above the ground, workmen believe.

Last spring, it was pointed out, the water damaged the structures to the extent that some of the bridge pilings were loosened. The wet ground between the bridges made walking almost impossible.

Under the new set up the walk through the slip area, which provides a short cut for persons crossing from one side of the city to the other, will be substantial and safe, it was said.

Children are cautioned not to molest the structures. In the past, it was said, considerable damage was done by children who ripped loose the guard rails and pried off some of the boards.

Believe It Or Not, Manistique Had A Grass Fire Dec. 9

A grass fire on December 9, believe it or not, took place in Manistique. Fire Chief Elmer Boal reports.

Starting near the Manistique Pulp and Paper company plant, the fire ran through the field of dry grass along the river bed to River street. Fanned by a strong wind, it moved with rapidity in an easterly direction. Firemen were called and stood by to protect a building on River street, which was threatened by the blaze.

Chief Boal said that he has no record of a grass fire in this area at such a late date.

WOMEN'S CLUB PROGRAM SET

"Living Pictures" With Music Features Xmas Program Sunday

Final arrangements will be made today for the presentation by the Manistique Women's club of "The Coming of the King," a community Christmas program in living pictures and song, on Sunday, December 12, at 5 p. m. in the high school auditorium.

Presented again this year by popular request, after several appearances in past years, including one in Escanaba, "Living Pictures" is expected to draw a capacity crowd. Persons who have seen it before declare the posed pictures are remarkable replicas of the original old masterpieces.

Music accompanying the living pictures is said to be especially outstanding this year. The high school girls' glee club has been rehearsing appropriate selections for the program, and a ladies' ensemble will sing "Alleluia" by Mozart. As an offertory number a violin duet, "Christmas Fantasy" by Carl Olson and Norman Martin will be played.

Miss Margaret Johnson, high school music instructor, has arranged such selections as "Lo, How a Rose E'er Blooming," "A Shepherd on his Lonely Hill," "The Holy Child" and other appropriate background music for each picture.

Pictures will be presented by the drama committee of the Women's club under the direction of Mrs. C. F. Anderson and Mrs. W. L. Norton. Scriptures will be read by Miss Florence Panatoni. Mrs. A. F. Hall will be accompanist. The ladies' ensemble will include Mesdames Otmer Schuster, George Morton, Donald McLean, Elmer Lundstrom, Lauritz Dreydahl, Arthur Adams, Mauritz Carlson, Elwood Taylor and Scott Creighton.

The public is invited to attend the program, but children under 12 years of age should be accompanied by their parents.

Husband Of Former Manistique Girl Dies In Toronto

Eustice Jack Evenden, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, husband of the former Eva Anderson of Manistique, died on November 20, at the Toronto General hospital, following a serious operation from which he failed to rally.

Mr. Evenden was born in Eastbourne, England, August 25, 1897, and was brought to Sault Ste. Marie, by his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Evenden, when he was six months old. He served overseas with the 114th in World War I, enlisting in January, 1915. In June of 1918, he was invalided home and entered the employ of the Algoma Steel Corporation.

Early in October, he was taken ill and he was confined to bed at his home until his removal to the Toronto hospital on November 10. He is survived by his wife and three children: Emmeline, a student at the University of Louisville, and Jackie and Carla-Dawn, at home; and two sisters Mrs. John Greenfield, Jr., and Mrs. J. C. Rankin, R. N., both of Louisville.

Services were held Wednesday afternoon, November 24, at St. Luke's pro-Cathedral, following a private service at the home, 171 Church street. The Very Rev. Dean W. L. Wright conducted the services. Burial was in the family plot in Greenwood cemetery.

Palbearers were men who had served with Mr. Evenden overseas. At the graveside rites, the president of the Free Legion spoke and the "Last Post" was sounded by Comrade Charles Duncan.

Will Receive Two Ration Points for One Pound of Fat

Housewives will receive two brown ration points in exchange for a pound of used household fats beginning Monday, the OPA has announced.

Under the new "points-for-fat" program, the OPA has established an incentive, in addition to the four cents per pound now being paid for fats at meat markets, for housewives to salvage household fats. Official announcement of the reward program sets the effective date for the start of the system as Monday, December 13.

"The task of the salvage committee in each community should become immeasurably more simple," the OPA points out. "Thousands of homemakers who have not saved fats will now do so, and thousands of others who have saved some fat, but not all of it, will increase their collections. However, two points per pound is not a large award, and two points won't buy a large steak. Homemakers should bear in mind that fats are needed vitally in the manufacture of munitions. Salvaging fats is a major part of the home-front war effort."

Sgt. and Mrs. Ralph Deloria are the parents of a son, William Ralph, born on Thursday, December 2, at the Shaw hospital. Sgt. Deloria is stationed at Camp Butler, North Carolina.

Eskymos Lose Thriller To Iron Mountain; Emeralds Beat Braves

VISITORS TAKE 27-23 DECISION

Ranguette Tops Scoring With 20 Points In Hard Fight

The Eskymos staged a gallant uphill battle after a dismal opening last night but finally bowed to Iron Mountain, 27 to 23, in a harum-scarum finish that had the crowd in a wild uproar until the final gong.

Despite their defeat, the Eskymos gained a large following of staunch supporters because of the fighting determination they displayed after a very wobbly start in which Iron Mountain gave every indication of winning in a breeze.

Constantini, the towering Mountaineer center, hooked in two field goals and two free throws before Kuchenberg opened the scoring for the Eskymos with a looping goal from the corner. Ranguette added a free throw for Escanaba to make the score, 6 to 3, but Constantini rammed home another hook shot and Anderson dropped in a bucket from the side to make the score 12 to 3 as the quarter ended.

Ladwig and Constantini added field goals for Iron Mountain to make the count 16 to 3 and at this point the Escanaba cause appeared hopeless. Ladwig added another free throw for the Mountaineers but Ranguette followed with two overhead shots to bring the count to 17-7 before the half ended.

20 Points For Ranguette

Ranguette scored a free throw, a field goal and another free throw at the start of the third quarter to narrow the gap to 17-11, but Constantini showed in a bucket and Kuchenberg scored a free throw just before the third period ended with the score, 19-12.

Ranguette scored for Escanaba to start the fourth period and Constantini followed with a free throw for Iron Mountain. Ranguette retaliated with a field goal, a free throw and another field goal to bring the count to 20-19 as the crowd roared. Anderson sneaked in for a goal for Iron Mountain and Ranguette followed with one for Escanaba and the score was 22-21.

The break came on the next play, with Anderson getting two free throws on Peterson's foul. He sunk both of them to make the score 24-21 and then followed through with a bucket. Ranguette scored a field goal to make the count 26-23, but Ladwig put the game on ice with a free throw with only a few seconds of play remaining.

In the battle of the centers, Ranguette came out with top honors, scoring 20 of the Eskymos' 23 points while Constantini rammed in 13 points for Iron Mountain.

The Sports Parade

By Ken Gunderman

All of the hue and cry concerning the charges of gambling by the Washington Redskins apparently has been started by the bookies who were taken for a ride on the Washington-New York game last Sunday.

The professional gamblers were clipped to a fare-thee-well when the Giants sprung the big upset of the season and knocked off the Redskins last Sunday. Thereupon the gamblers, who have been praying upon the sports public for years, began to yell that they were double crossed, that the game was a frame-up.

George P. Marshall, owner of the Redskins, immediately branded the charges of gambling by Redskins players as a lie and posted a reward of $5,000 for anyone who could prove the charges.

While the feud rages on, the sports public can sit back and smile, happy in the knowledge that the clippers got clipped. The gamblers have never contributed anything worthwhile to sports and never will, but constitute a source of evil gnawing at the integrity of sports.

The sports public knows that upsets, even startling upsets such as the New York victory over the Redskins, are a normal part of football and the occasional upsets are the only thing that keep the gamblers from making a complete gouge at the expense of the fans. Three cheers for more and bigger upsets!

While we're on the subject of gambling, will someone please

Each team made nine field goals but Iron Mountain cashed in nine free throws to only five for Escanaba.

step forward and explain why legislators are so eager to shy away from taxes on race track betting. After a long wrangle the house of representatives in Washington recently approved a 5% tax on parimutuel betting (compared with a 10% tax now existing on theatre tickets and admission tickets of all kinds), but the senate finance committee eliminated the proposed tax on parimutuel betting. Here's the payoff: The same committee voted the double the tax on admission tickets.

The American League has announced the adoption of a rule that will force the pitcher, when next at bat, to take his place in the batter's circle, the same as any other player. The practice has been for the pitcher to remain on the bench until his time at bat. The pitchers then fumbled the bats for several minutes before selecting the warclub. The change in the rules is designed to save time and keep the game moving.

Another change adopted at the recent meeting of the American league will give visiting teams 30 minutes of batting practice, instead of 20 minutes as in the past. The 30 minute batting period will be in effect from the start of the season to June 1, and is designed to compensate for teams training in the north, which it is claimed has tended to dull batting eyes in early season.

Manistique—The Emeralds staged a second half rally here last night to defeat Gladstone, 31 to 27, in hotly fought contest.

In the second and third periods, Gladstone scored a single field goal in each quarter but kept pressing the Emeralds as a result of proficiency from the charity lane.

The battle was close right down to the closing seconds. Gladstone lost Ridings, center, on fouls in the final period.

MISSING IN ACTION

Marquette—Lieut. John Hassall, U. S. Army pilot, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hassall, 426 Spruce street, has been reported missing in action over Germany. The War Department's message to his parents contains no details, but it is believed he has been missing for a week or more.

Lieut. Hassall, who received his Army wings and commission last May at Williams Field, Chandler, Ariz., has been serving overseas since last August as a pilot in a squadron of P-38 fighter planes.

Hassall, a graduate of Graver-att high school and the Michigan College of Mining and Technology, was employed as a mining engineer prior to his enlistment in the Army.

MAY BE STILL ALIVE

Marquette—Information which gives them hope that their son, 1st. Lieut. George Bennett, U. S. Marine corps fighter pilot who was reported missing in action in the South Pacific in September, is alive and may be a prisoner of the Japs, has been received by his parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. K. Bennett, East Arch street.

The encouraging news came in a letter from the commanding officer of the Marine fighter squadron of which Lieut. Bennett was a member. The commander said Bennett's plane was disabled and forced down while the squadron was returning to its base from a mission which took it deep into enemy territory.

HERO GIVES TALKS

Houghton—Holder of five awards for gallantry displayed in twenty-five bombing missions over France and Germany, Technical Sergeant (now Aviation Student) Bruno Stanczyk this week described his experiences to students of Calumet, Lake Linden, and Painesdale high schools.

Sgt. Stanczyk, an aerial gunner, is at present a member of the 98th College Training Detachment, AAF, at the Michigan College of Mining and Technology. A Cleveland, he is 22 years old.

He holds the Distinguished Flying Cross, Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star, Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters, and Purple Heart. He has shot down seven enemy planes, with three more counted as probables. On five occasions he had to bail out of crippled ships, and was twice wounded.

He was introduced to the high school assemblies by Lt. Lynn Stamm of the 98th, who also explained briefly the Air Corps and Air-WAC recruitment program.

The St. Joseph high school basketball team will play its second game of the week tonight, meeting Rapid River at the Wm. Bonifas gymnasium here. The reserve teams of the schools will meet in a seven o'clock preliminary and the feature game is scheduled for 8:15 o'clock.

The Trojans defeated the Baraga Parochials of Marquette Wednesday night, 31 to 26, and look impressive in that victory. Their passing was the best of the season and they showed a higher percentage of scoring shots than in previous games.

Trade Efforts Starts Indian-Red Sox Feud

BY STEVE O'LEARY

Boston, Dec. 10 (AP)—Attempts of the Boston Red Sox to fashion a winter trade with the Cleveland Indians have borne fruit—but it's nothing but hard feelings between the two clubs.

The sudden feud stemmed from the discovery of Owner Tom Yawkey.

Yawkey still thinks he was "had" on a couple of occasions in his early career as a magnate when he was pouring bundles of dough into the baseball bourse in his efforts to produce a pennant winner for his newly acquired Boston followers.

As soon as he learned of what was going on in Cleveland, he called the whole thing off yesterday, apparently considerably irked about being classed still in the piscatorial category by some of his fellow magnates.

As far as Yawkey is concerned—despite a sincere desire to strengthen his forces this winter—he'll wind up in last place for the next decade rather than consider doing business with the Cleveland club.

That's Boston's stand on the matter and Cleveland's side of the story has not reached this sector as yet. According to General Manager Eddie Collins, however, Yawkey's information was glibbed and as far as the Red Sox owner is concerned his club and the Indians have pit-ft!

Collins explained Yawkey had no objection to Cleveland doing whatever it wished with the players after the trade was made but didn't like the idea of such "manipulations," before the deal went through.

Thus Cleveland lost one golden opportunity to comb the temperamental Bagby out of Lou Boudreau's hair. Golden, particularly, since the long-suffering Joe Cronin had manifested willingness to take another chance with this most effective hurler.

Instead, they have lost the friendship of Tom Hawkey, who, of late, has been showing a laudable desire for only a little encouragement to start throwing large, coarse bundles of green stuff around.

Racing Hits New Highs During 1943

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—Spearheaded by an astonishing $100,000,000 jump in New York alone, the country's racing hit new highs during 1943 with $710,779,432 in bets and $32,534,484.30 in revenue to the states throughout the year.

The new records, compared with the $563,579,895 in betting and $24,687,381.71 in state revenue during 1942, were made in spite of the suspension of racing in four states and the cut in the Florida season from 100 to 15 days.

Altogether, 15 states survived during the year and new marks were set in Massachusetts, Illinois, New Jersey and Michigan as well as New York.

Tommy Bridges Bids Old Stadium Goodbye

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP)—Tommy Bridges paid his last visit to Briggs Stadium today before reporting to Fort Sheridan, Ill., to begin army duty. He was inducted three weeks ago.

Bridges stopped at the ball park to say goodbye to Owner Walter O. Briggs and members of the Tiger staff.

"I'm ready to go wherever the army thinks I can be most useful," declared the slender right-handed pitcher. Bridges will be 37 this month and is married and the father of an eight-year-old daughter.

Negaunee Beats Newberry, 47-28

Negaunee defeated Newberry, 47 to 28, in a basketball game at Negaunee last night. Tonkin and Trewhella, both of Negaunee, tied for high point honors, with 11 each. Leonard of Newberry scored 10 points.

Officials were Schram of Escanaba and Cameron of Gladstone.

FAVORITES UP 1 TO 5 POINTS

BY BERNARD S. O'HARA

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—The stock market today whipped up a selective rally behind farm implements, mail orders, gold mining and industrial blue chips.

The list got off to an uneven start but firm bidding soon stiffened quotations generally with activity brisk during the third hour. Big gains ranged from 1 to 5 points for favorites. These were reduced in most cases at the close as dealings flowed.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 4 1/2 points at 49.1. Transfers totaled 866,549 shares compared with 856,430 the day before.

Among advances, J. I. Case ended with a net of 4 1/2 points. Lesser improvement was realized by International Harvester, Caterpillar Tractor, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Dime Mines, Homestake, Alaska Jones, Omnium Corp., Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, U. S. Steel, Chrysler and American Telephone.

American Dittling was up 2 points or so and down as much at intervals and ended with a plus mark of 3-1/2. Losers included Bethlehem, Southern Railway, Western Union "A", General Motors, Allied Chemical, Boeing and Goodyear. American Locomotive voted a 50-cent dividend on the common, first since 1931, but the stock emerged unchanged at 14 1/2.

On the upside in the curb were Lake Shore, Aluminum, Ltd., Elbert Bond & Share, Cities Service, E. W. Bliss, Bellanca Aircraft, Cuban Atlantic Sugar and Creole Petroleum. The latter was up 245,270 shares versus 174,550 yesterday.

BIG ISSUE OFFERED

New York, Dec. 10 (AP)—The bond market today exhibited a strong power today while one of the largest public utility offerings of the year was made public.

An assortment of rail, utility and utility ended higher by fractions to more than a point, although there were a certain number of backward issues in all the major groups at the close. U. S. shipments were neglected. Sales of $9,795,500 compared with $8,237,000 on Thursday.

A nation-wide syndicate headed by the First Boston Corp. came into the investment market with a new issue of $40,000,000 Utah Power & Light 3-4s at 109 5/8. It was the first issue of any size in weeks and some quarters believed would be the last large offering in 1943. The managers reported a demand for the new bonds, proceeds from which will be used to retire some of the company's outstanding obligations.

Issues giving a good account of themselves in the listed market included various loans of the Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Northern, Western, Rock Island, Columbia Gas, Rio Grande Western, International Great Northern and Missouri Pacific. The listing also included Hocking Valley 4 1/2s, Colorado & N. 4 1/2s, and a new issue of Brazil 8s and Chile 6s advanced in an otherwise quiet foreign department.

CITY WANTS PUMP

Iron Mountain—Confirming his argument to the county board at the last meeting, George C. Newton, consulting engineer of this city, has directed a letter to the supervisors, urging that the Cornish pump be decided to the city, for maintenance, and giving reasons for the request.

Newton and Don Smith, chamber secretary, appeared before the board at the last meeting, urging that bids on the pump, for salvage, be rejected, and that it be turned over to the city of Iron Mountain, as a permanent monument.

The board rejected several bids and was about to turn the pump over the city when it received a telegram from the district War Production Board office at Green Bay, emphasizing the need for salvage metal and advising that the pump be scrapped at once. The board thereupon held up action on transfer of the pump, pending further inquiry.

LULL IN REICH RAIDING ENDED

Big Procession Of RAF Bombers Roars Over Channel

BY AUSTIN BEALMEAR
London, Saturday, Dec. 11. (AP)—A 45-minute procession of RAF bombers roared across the Straits of Dover in moonlight last night, and a continental radio blackout indicated that the week-long lull in the new aerial campaign to level Germany had ended.

During the afternoon, allied warplanes subjected Sofia, Bulgarian capital, to what was described as that city's worst raid of the war.

Following the departure of the first procession of bombers last night, other planes were heard thundering out toward northern France as the skies cleared and presented good visibility for the first time in days.

Nazi raiders, few in number, also gave London its first alert since Dec. 1.

The Nazi radios, including Deutschlandsender, main station in the area of rubble-carpeted Berlin, began signing off around 7 p. m., after low-flying Mosquitos had dealt stinging daylight blows to enemy transport facilities in northwestern Germany.

For nearly two hours after noon, allied planes raided Sofia, capital of Bulgaria, for the third time in a month, causing considerable damage and numerous deaths the Sofia radio said.

Roving over northwest Germany in pairs, the Mosquitos, which kept Berliners running to air raid shelters almost nightly between the bigger RAF smashes, peppered troops, railway junctions, trains, barges, tugboats, trucks, and planes. Two Mosquitos were lost.

TOMATO DIVIDED

Pueblo, Colo. (AP)—A few years ago F. L. Hughtitt gave one ounce of tomato seed to the Colorado State hospital. This season the hospital had grown enough seed to plant 20 acres in tomatoes, sufficient not only to keep the hospital in fresh tomatoes for the summer but enough in addition to fill 25,000 gallon containers.

Status Of 1-A Fathers Unchanged; Manpower Chief Loses Authority

BY HOWARD FLEGER
Washington, Dec. 10. (AP)—President Roosevelt has approved a congressional attempt to slow the father draft—but the future looked unchanged tonight to 1-A dads: When the army wants them, they're going.

Disregarding a veto request from War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, the president signed the bill which strips McNutt of all authority over Selective Service at the same time it orders prewar fathers placed at the bottom of the draft pool—provided such action does not interfere with the "orderly flow of the nation's manpower into the armed forces."

Neither McNutt nor Major General Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, would see reporters today to discuss the bill's effect on the draft and civilian manpower.

There was some speculation that McNutt might now resign.

On Oct. 1 McNutt issued an order putting fathers on the draft's bottom rung but they have been going into the armed services with every selective service call since then. Hershey, no longer under McNutt's manpower directives, reportedly told a closed meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers at New York yesterday that about 1,000,000 pre-pearl Harbor fathers would be inducted by next July according to present schedules.

If it doesn't change things much for draft-eligible fathers, it does make major changes in the nation's control over the manpower situation. After putting dads behind all other available draft groups, the bill:

1. Lodges full draft authority in the hands of the president and the director of selective service, an officer previously subject to McNutt's general manpower directives, both civilian and military.

2. Wipes out "occupational" inductions, cancelling the manpower commission's "work or fight" order which made men in some occupations non-deferrable regardless of family status.

3. Creates a five-member medical commission, appointed by the president, to review military physical and mental standards to see if they can be lowered enough to pick up some 4-F's.

4. Gives draft appeal boards at the place of employment authority to pass on occupational deferments for so-called essential workers, his deferment now is fixed by appeal boards where the worker registered for the draft, frequently hundreds of miles away from the place where he works.

5. Registrants who want to know their draft outlook can arrange through local boards to have their army physical examination in advance of an induction notice. The result of that examination, however, will not be binding when a regular draft notice is issued.

PREFERENCE ORDERED
Washington, Dec. 10. (AP)—President Roosevelt's approval of a congressional effort to slow the father draft was followed tonight by selective service instructions giving preferential draft status to fathers employed in war production.

In new orders to local draft boards, Major General Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, declared that existing regulations should be "liberally construed" with respect to occupational deferment of fathers for war production.

"Fathers who are eligible for occupational deferment under the provisions of local board memorandum No. 115 (authorizing draft boards to weigh replaceability) and who are making contributions in war production or in support of the war effort are usually stable employees and if other factors are equal, will normally be accorded deferment in preference to non-fathers," Hershey advised.

Otherwise, presidential approval of the father-draft bill apparently failed to change materially the status of 1-A dads, for when the army wants them—they're going.

Canadian Steamer On Keweenaw Reef; Crew Stays Aboard

Calumet, Mich., Dec. 10. (AP)—The Canadian steamer Sarnian, a 2,656-ton freighter formerly under American register as the Chili, pounded on a reef in a gale off Point Isabelle on the east shore of the Keweenaw Peninsula today.

The Eagle harbor Coast Guard station, which sent a crew to stand by, reported the 331-foot vessel ran aground in 16 feet of water during the night, apparently while seeking shelter from a gale sweeping Lake Superior.

The Coast Guard reported this afternoon that the Sarnian's cargo must be lightened before the vessel could be released from the reef. A lighter was ordered from Port Arthur, Ont.

Members of the Sarnian's crew remained aboard her, waiting the arrival of the lighter.

The Sarnian was built 48 years ago at Cleveland, O. Her registered home port is Port Arthur, Ont., and her listed owners are the Northern Steamship company.

SOLDIER SLAIN, WIFE WOUNDED

Detroit Veteran Shoots Estranged Spouse And Kills Himself

Detroit, Dec. 10. (AP)—From a bed in Receiving hospital today Mrs. Loren Ferry, 27, told police she was shot last night by her husband, a discharged soldier, as she fled from him after refusing to accept a proposed reconciliation.

Ferry, 41 years old and a veteran of the European, Middle East and African theaters of war, was found dead in his wife's apartment, his shotgun beside his body.

Detective Sergeant Maurice Fullerton said Mrs. Ferry told him that the two had contemplated divorce before he joined the army in May, 1942, and that when Ferry returned, Mrs. Ferry agreed to meet his train because she had his automobile.

Ferry went to a Third avenue hotel, Fullerton related, and last night when he came to his wife's apartment to get his radio and shotgun, attempted to effect a reconciliation. The officer continued:

"She refused. 'I am going to get you back or shoot both of us,' Ferry told her. She ran at him and deflected his gun. Then she started to run from the apartment. A shotgun blast hit her as she was going through the door."

Mrs. Ferry was wounded in the chin, right arm and chest.

Nazis Desperate
It was a bloody business to smash the Nazis from their mountain chain, and tough fighting still is ahead before the Allies can hope to carve their way deeper into the intricate series of entrenchments, minefields and gun positions dotting the valley and neighboring hillsides before and even beyond Cassino.

A field dispatch from Don White of the Associated Press said the Nazis were fighting desperately to hold the village of San Pietro at the foot of Mt. Samucro, seven miles from Cassino.

The Allies' strategic airforce was grounded because of bad weather, but the tactical force sent out a half-dozen different types of planes to bomb and strafe ships, bridges, highway intersections, troop concentrations and gun positions. Four Allied planes were missing from these extensive operations.

HUNGARY ABOUT TO QUIT NAZIS

Fear Of Allied Invasion
Hangs Over Satellite
Balkan State

Stockholm, Dec. 10. (AP)—A threat of complete occupation by the Germans hangs over Hungary as a result of the satellite state's strained relations with the Nazis and fear of an Allied invasion of the Balkans, persons familiar with the situation said tonight.

The danger has been growing more acute daily since the Tehran and Cairo conferences and the resultant speculation about Turkey's future role in the war, these sources reported, because Hungary holds a strategic key of southeastern Europe, especially in communications. Germany therefore cannot tolerate any wavering.

(A Swiss report broadcast by Radio Algiers said Hungary had instructed her ambassador to the Vatican to try to open negotiations with the Allies to exempt Hungarian cities and towns from air attack. The Hungarian argument was said to be that supplies of food and other material to Germany had been suspended.

(Recent debates in the Hungarian parliament have emphasized a general desire to pull away from Germany.)

Casualties Of War Now Total 129,422

Washington, Dec. 10. (AP)—Casualties in the nation's armed forces since the beginning of the war total 129,422.

Official figures released today show 97,077 casualties in the army, and 32,345 in the navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

These comprised only the casualties whose families have been notified officially and probably do not include all the losses in the Gilbert Islands or the recent fighting in other theaters.

Swing To Republicans Predicted By Dethmers

Definite opinion that 1944 "will be a Republican year" was voiced here last night by John R. Dethmers, Lansing, chairman of the Republican state central committee, while in Escanaba to meet with Republican party leaders of Delta, Schoolcraft and Menominee counties. Dethmers came to Escanaba from Iron Mountain in completing a tour of the Upper Peninsula.

Dethmers met with the Republican party leaders at the Ludington hotel following a dinner. The meeting was arranged by A. J. Goulais of Escanaba, chairman of the Delta county Republican committee.

Republican victories at the polls in key states, and a "swing" away from the New Deal's domestic program, points the way to a sweeping Republican victory at the polls next year, Dethmers said.

Success of the Republican party in Michigan in the last two elections was due to the efforts and organization of the Republican county and precinct committees.

Resort Industry Leaders Planning For Postwar Era

Marquette—When the war is over and travel is easy again, the tourist and resort industry of the Upper Peninsula and of the entire state will be ready if detailed planning is any indication.

Conference after conference has been held not only on a state-wide basis, but the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau has held numerous meetings with resort and travel interests in the Upper Peninsula with the sole purpose of planning for the postwar period.

On December 8, George E. Bishop, secretary-manager of the Development Bureau, attended a meeting of the tourist and resort committee of the Michigan Hotel Association in Detroit, in joint conference with the resort and travel secretaries of the state.

On December 9 he presided at the second meeting of the tourist and resort sub-committee of the state planning commission and on the following day attended a meeting of the secretaries of Michigan's tourist and resort associations.

During a part of the second administration of President Andrew Jackson, the United States government had no national debt.

A dynamite explosion 2,000 miles away has been recorded on scientific instruments.

This organization, together with indications from other states, and the opinions expressed by leaders in other states, made Dethmers confident that not only Michigan but the nation will "go Republican" next year.

He urged the party leaders attending the meeting here last night to conduct an aggressive campaign to aid in bringing success in the coming elections.

There is in reality no stigma attached to the man or woman who engages in political activity to bring about better government, Dethmers said. Too often the word "politician" is accepted at its common interpretation, and as a result government suffers because persons best qualified as leaders fail to take an active interest in public office. In the broadest sense, a politician is one versed in the science of good government, and in that meaning "we should all be politicians," he added.

Plans for the 1944 Republican national convention will be made at a meeting of state chairmen to be held in Chicago on January 10 and 11.

In Michigan a new law adopted by the last state legislature makes it mandatory that county conventions be held not less than 30 days prior to the state convention, which must be scheduled not less than 60 days previous to the national meeting. Because it is expected the national meeting will be held in June, county conventions probably will be called in March.
